ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a communication terminal device, the connecting state of a call can certainly and easily be controlled without learning troublesome operating methods which are different depending on the connecting state of a call ~~as the conventional device~~. By providing a ~~control~~ controller ~~means~~ for displaying processing items available to a call on a display ~~means~~ and controlling the call into the connecting state corresponding to the processing item which is selected and determined by the user's operation of the ~~input means~~ an input unit, the user can control the connecting state of the call by merely selecting the desired processing item. ~~Thereby, the connecting state of the call can be controlled certainly and easily without learning troublesome operating methods which are different depending on the connecting state of the call as the conventional device.~~